Town Hall Forum — 2

The documentary evolved from a special topics class, Civil Rights in America: 1954-1964, that Merryman and Bindas taught in the fall of 2002. Students in the class interviewed Warren-area black residents who were civil rights activists or who witnessed or experienced racial segregation. As the oral history project progressed, the professors became aware of the significance and importance of the findings. "The honesty of the subjects in sharing their stories made us realize that we could document this form of cultural segregation through oral history," Bindas said.

The Invisible Struggles project has grown to include a high school history essay contest to be held in February 2007, where local high school students will be invited to participate in the forum and submit reflective essays with the opportunity to compete for Kent State Trumbull scholarships. Also in February, Invisible Struggles producers will release a curriculum guide for northeast Ohio schools to use in conjunction with the documentary.

The town hall forum broadcast is being underwritten by the Kent State President's Office, KSU Division of Regional Development, KSU Trumbull Campus, KSU Departments of Justice Studies and History and the Trumbull Diversity Council. For more information about the forum, call KSU Trumbull Campus at (330) 675-7615.
